THE SPREAD OF KNOWLEDGE.

No sooner do our school boys and girls get to installing radio sets than science announces that the lowly tumble bug uses radio for communication, and the evanescent lightning bug also uses a radio set for household illumination. In a few more years the mosquito will be using a drilling rig for his typhoid injections, and the rattlesnake will put in a self-winding coil. All animate creatures are soaking their hides full of the new knowledge—except father. He, poor devil, still buys oil stock, runs for office, grumbles about the bills and wonders why the rising generation has no sense about the value of a dollar. Father learns nothing and forgets nothing. He and Adam start from the same taw, and get no further as the generations pass.—William Allen White in Judge.

FIGHT OVER LUSITANIA.

International Complications May Follow Salvaging Plan.

Can the Lusitania, sunk during the war by a German submarine, be regarded as "a ship abandoned at sea," and thus the legitimate "prize" of whomever may take her in tow? Or do the rights of the Cunard steamship line and the Marine Insurance Company, which lost heavily in the wreck, continue in a ship which has lain on the bottom of the sea seven long years? This question is puzzling Washington "sea lawyers," following the announcement that the American steam Blakely is receiving at Philadelphia her finishing touches as a treasure hunter, with Lusitania as her goal.

For, from England comes the announcement that Count Landi, of the Ayeredy Salvage and Towage Syndicate, Ltd., has secured a contract for salvaging the sunken steamer, and that the necessary machinery will be ready in a few months to start the task.

The lure of sunken gold is strong, and the American crew of the Blakely have launched their treasure hunting expedition with the statement that they would all be rich by Christmas. Count Landi, in London, says he expects to make $5,000,000 out of his contract.

Capt. A. A. Bestic, third officer on the Lusitania when she was sunk, is inclined to punch large holes in these dreams of fortune. He says that as far as he knows there is no truth in the stories of great treasure in the liner's cargo. The speculator, he remembers, was almost empty. Furthermore, he says:

"Taking into consideration the fact that the Lusitania's length was roughly three times as great as the depth of water in which she sank, and the acute angle at which she took the plunge, it is obvious that her bow must have struck the bottom before she was completely submerged, and that this impact must have been sufficient to strain every rivet, if it didn't break her entirely in two. Her boilers must have tumbled pell mell into the bows, carrying all before them. I have little doubt they exploded, as there was a muffled roar immediately afterward. I was flung out of the water waist high."

The methods proposed by the American and British treasure hunters are entirely different. The British outfit proposes to send divers down to close the water-tight compartments, force the water out by means of compressed air so that the ship will become buoyant and rise of itself.

The Americans have no such illusions, they say. They propose to blast into the wreckage and take whatever of value they may find out by means of giant grappling hooks. Capt. Richards of the Blakely, announced that the treasure ship would not stop at the Lusitania, but would attempt operations on the Arabic, the Belong and the Oceanic, also sunk by U-boats during the war. Capt. Richards said even the Spanish galleons might be tackled.

MYSTERY LAND.

Dis is wash-day at de tub
Stan' back, don't spill yo' dress;
Ah'll tell yo' 'bout de ghosts an' ha'n'ts
De witches en de res'.

Whah'd Ah see dem sights las' night?
Why, in de church, white chile.
Wuz Ah skeered? Now, wuz Ah!
Ah broke an' runned a mile.

No, tain't no person, nuther.
Live folks don't never shine;
Ghosts steps fum out de darkness
En leaves dey light behin'.

Sometimes dey dwells in toad frogs,
Den ag'in in rusty nails;
Black cats is mighty 'spicious
When dey slowly twitch dey tails.

Now, lemme wash dese white fo'ke
clo'es
En do mah work up right;
Run on, Honey, fuh dis time.
Ah'll tell de res' tonight.

THE DREGS OF HYPOCRISY.

Necessity knows no law, so the United States Treasury Department rules that the sale of liquor on American ships outside the three-mile zone is permissible. The storage of liquor within the three-mile zone and in port for sale on the high seas is legal; so is the transshipment of liquor through American territory for sea sale, although all other transshipments through American territory are illegal and subject the liquor to confiscation.

The Treasury has not yet ruled on the legality of the purchase in American territory of moonshine whisky from bootleggers for sale at sea. The wine cards of Government ships list American moonshine at 30 cents a drink, five cents higher than Scotch whisky, because it is illegally obtained. This will be declared legal in time. We predict that the Government will go the whole hypocritical hog to save the merchant marine.

This exemption of American ships which need the profit of bootlegging to keep going, will not, however, interfere with the drastic enforcement of prohibition against ordinary bootleggers and plain citizens on land. The agents provocateurs and snooping enforcement officers of the Government will have blind eyes for bootlegging on the docks and the sea, but a thousand eyes will be turned on the poor devils who want beer or wine or whisky, or who sell these alcoholic beverages on land. The American landlubbers must be saved from their depraved appetites at any cost to their liberty and pocketbook, while the American seagoers can go to the devil at a handsome profit for the Government.

This is as it must be. When a Government abandons its fundamental principles and gets into the prohibition mess of tyranny and hypocrisy it must be prepared to sound the depths of moral and political infamy.

We do not envy the Federal Judges who sit in solemn judgment and impose heavy sentences of fine and imprisonment on those miserable wretches—plain, unprivileged citizens—who make home brew or possess or sell liquor of any kind, while moonshine is purchased and all kinds of liquor are possessed in port and sold on the sea by the Government, on Government owned ships. We do not envy the prohibition officers who disguise themselves to lure and provoke bootleggers to sell them a drink or a bottle and chase bellboys and waiters and bartenders for possessing and selling moonshine, while aproned bartenders and waiters and cabin boys sell it without limit on Government ships, for the profit of the United States Treasury.

While it is illegal, immoral and disgraceful to make or drink American beer and wine on land, the Government promotes the profitable making of foreign beer and wine and makes profit by selling them on its own ships. It is pro-German, according to Chairman Lasker, for an American brewer to protest against the prohibition of American beer and the sale of German beer on American ships, but it is 100 per cent American for the American Government to sell German beer on its own ships and prohibit the making or selling of American beer.

These, we repeat, are the fruits of prohibition folly and fanaticism. They are bitter fruits, full of the acrid juice of dishonor, dishonesty and shame. We must drink the dregs of hypocrisy and moral and political degradation that we may be saved from drinking a drop of alcohol—on land.—Post-Dispatch.

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE.

William Wrigley Jr. is soon to own the largest office building in Chicago—built with money made in selling chewing gum at five cents a package. Back in 1907, just fifteen years ago, he was unknown. Then he began to advertise Wrigley's gum. The more he advertised the greater the demand for his brand of chewing gum, of course. Soon he was spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising—and making millions in return. Today he is among the wealthiest men in America—but he is still advertising—and still selling gum. If Wrigley can do this well with a five-cent article and lots of competition, think what others can do with goods on which there is more profit, and in a field that isn't so crowded. There is a lesson in Wrigley's experience for anyone who cares to learn it. And that is that no matter how small the profit, there's money in it if you sell enough of it. And the way to sell enough of it is to advertise it.

Think It Over

THE FLAPPER AND THE BIBLE.

I have been reading the different ideas of people in regard to the dress question. As a Christian man I think it high time fathers and mothers are waking up to the disgraceful, degrading, immodest way young girls are dressed today. Mother and father, when your girl dresses up in her latest style dress, just get your Bible and turn to First Timothy, second chapter and ninth verse, which reads like this: "In like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel; with shame-facedness and sobriety, not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." Then take a look at her with her dress to her knees, exposing her limbs, and far too short at the other end, exposing her body to the gazing public. Yours in Christian love.—Ben Trinkle, Valeene, Ind., in Rural American.

RECIPE FOR MAKING "WHITE MULE."

Chase seven grasshoppers four miles, carefully gathering up the hops. Place hops in cut glass ash barrel and leave out on a rainy day until barrel is 3/4 filled with water. Add one can of lye, a cake of scalp-mine, a pair of castoff shoes, some steel filings and a dash of slumgion. Stir rapidly with a long arm lunch hook 10 minutes each day, keeping same at a fierce boil for three weeks. Strain through an I. W. W. sock to keep from working. Add some mule hoof to give it a kick; then bottle. Take out life insurance and drink over an open grave.—Ex.
